What is the Understanding & Analyzing Community Context Program?

Mobaderoon works on the vision of “Building trust & understanding to support & maintain peaceful coexistence”, and Mobaderoon believes that achieving this vision is mainly done through sustainable communities which lead to an active and organized civil society. The basics of this is building the capacities of individuals & institutions so they can convey the voice of the community and to provide a space for activists to exchange learning and work experiences alike.

The context analysis program is a study of the needs of society, and titling individuals with the necessary tools to identify their society and the correct methods of intervention that constitute more sustainable and participatory resources and changes on the ground.

This program is based on the introduction of various tools to study the needs on the ground and to build on resources and the power of influence in society. The methodology of this program is based on flexible and adjustable tools in a way that suits each community and each team can adapt them to its needs, to help it understand the community in which it is intervening and to determine the priority of the intervention.

Tool Goals

- understanding the context of the area to place interventions in place that are suitable to the contexts and are of more value.
- Identify the needs of the area originating from understanding the context of the area.
- Determine team intervention priority based on resources and impact.
- Choosing intervention means and need-appropriate tools, and build real partnerships to reach a cohesive society.
- Study the to-be-changed and understand its context according to overall understanding.
- Understand the context of the team and what impact the context has on the team.
- Transfer experience to the team and community individual activists.

Program Learning Journey

- The workshop offers several tools to help think in a new way about interventions based on a general understanding of community and its components from the context and understanding the links and relationships of influence and impact among them within contexts.
- The journey of the tools' proceeds from the general understanding of the community and the people influencing it and entities to the specific understanding of the intervention carried out by community teams and attention to the role of influential stakeholders in the intervention of the general community.
- Thus, we undertake a journey to understand the intervention accurately based on the general context, as the program presents tools for analyzing relationships and tools to understand the impact of the development team within this overall context.
- Another necessity is to put the tools that help understand the needs of the community on display, to choose intervention priorities based on the resources of the teams and the impact resulting from the overall context of the community.
- The tools help reconsider interventions implemented by development work teams, or to find new interventions of higher benefit that are researched with higher accuracy to found a focused impact in the community.
- The tools help understand the roles of others and those of the partners', and consider the intervention the team implement as part of the interventions of other teams.
- The tools, also, help return to true community needs and move further from delusionary assumptions; hence, interventions of greater impact.
- In addition, these tools enhance the role of individuals in social cohesion and influence.
